SONG

The following song was composed by A. L. Gobble, of Vera, R. F. D. 8, Appomattox:

Mother-in-law .... Law

CHORUS

Mother-in-law, in-law, out-law,
What kind of law have you now?
I've broke every law in this town,
But mother-in-law, you can't get around;
I tried it twice, this I will tell,
Got two black eyes and a week in jail.

It's surprising to you how fast they change,
This mother-in-law—Law is but a game;
It all seemed to happen our wedding night,
She whispered, "Daughter, hold him tight;
Stop his drinking, put up a fight,
You hold the ace card here to-night;
Make him stop his trifling ways,
If he don't, you know alimony pays;"
This is mother-in-law—Law ways.

You can hear her coming a mile away,
With clothes for a week, and a month she'll stay;
She'll start her yaking time she walks in,
"You lazy but," with a grin;
"You're a trifling man, I wouldn't have around,
I'd get my alimony and leave this town."

REPEAT CHORUS

Mother-in-law, in-law, out-law,
What kind of law have you now?
I've broke every law in this town,
But mother-in-law—Law, you can't get around;
I tried it twice, this I will tell,
Got two black eyes and a week in jail.

Seniors Trip to New York Reported

By Margaret Deaner

New York! A few weeks ago this was a magic word for the Appomattox seniors. On behalf of the senior class, I would like to thank each and every person who bought peanuts or contributed in some way to our trip. We extend to you our heartfelt thanks for giving us a unique prerogative.

Wednesday night we boarded a chartered bus at the high school. Friends and well-wishers were there to see us off, and it gave us a warm feeling to see them waving as we pulled out on our long journey.

Laughter and singing filled the bus as we started our day of riding with pleasure.

We reached our destination at 10:30 A. M. on Thursday. You could see the skyscrapers peer here and there, and you could read the wonderment in their eyes that this was New York.

Maybe you saw our sign on the Holland Tunnel Skyway Show, but if you didn't, you can feel assured that Appomattox was well represented. Our tour of Rockefeller Center was a thrilling event. It was rather hard to comprehend that this one place was almost a city in itself. There were odd sights: Have you ever seen grass grow on top of a building? All of the seniors were glad to see the "green grass of Virginia."

Thursday afternoon was ours. We could go shopping or tour the city. We had loads of fun unpacking and getting settled in our hotel rooms. Thursday night we went to the "Bal Taborin," a night club, for dinner. The floor show was entertaining, and the comedian was good. If you don't believe this, ask Mrs. Brown. And, please, remember to ask the boys about the cheap Coca-Cola's.

The next morning we were up with the lady who was singing opera across the street. We got our breakfast on our own, and assembled in front of our hotel, the Piccadilly, to go for a tour of the city.

This big day included a ferry ride to the Statue of Liberty. I know now how our soldiers feel when they first see the torch in the lady's hand. The statue was not exactly what I had visualized. They had elevator service for a dime, but because we were conservative, we walked up the twenty-two flights of stairs. We toured the N. B. C. Building, and it was fascinating to learn how they make "Silver" gallop.

We went to the one-hundred-second floor of the Empire State Building. It was rather breezy up there, and the people on the streets looked like little dots moving along.

We stopped at a beautiful cathedral, St. John the Divine. A stillness and quietness prevailed over the entire group. The building was so large and impressive that it made us feel very small and very humble. The aisle was 601 feet long, and the stained glass window in the top was 60 feet in diameter.

Last, but certainly not least, we visited Chinatown. This was educational as well as entertaining. The curio shops were quaint, and there were some quaint prices. Our eyes weren't playing tricks when we saw a jade bracelet marked $250. I'm still trying to figure out why Mr. Miller wouldn't buy the "Hobo" newspaper. The newsman tried so hard to sell him one.

Friday night we attended the Ringling Bros., Barnum, Bailey Circus at Madison Square Garden.

Saturday morning we were all awake to attend a performance at Radio City Music Hall. This place was one of the most impressive that we saw. The furnishings inside were too beautiful for words. The curtains were rather expensive-looking, and the stages came out of the floor. The orchestra even came out of the floor. Grace Kelly played in "The Swan." This was a wonderful story, but it had a horrible ending. We heard a symphony orchestra, which was a real treat. We would have enjoyed it more, but there were two women sitting behind us who needed a music appreciation course. The famous "Rockettes" entertained us with their songs and dancing. They were grand, and they formed a picture of perfection.

Saturday afternoon we did various things. Some went shopping, and some went to Yankee Stadium. Another group caught the subway, or perhaps the subway caught them.

Saturday night we attended the Dennis James "Chance of a Lifetime" television show.

All aboard Saturday night for Appomattox. The ride home was pleasant until early Sunday morning. Are you wondering what happened? Well, one of the girls decided to serenade us with "When We Come To the End of a Perfect Day."

You should have heard the "Rah! Rah! Rah! for Appomattox" when we reached the Surrender Grounds.

Thanks again for "Our Chance of a Lifetime."

Health and Beauty

Most parents would be shocked if they thought their child was anemic. However, iron deficiency is so common in infants from about three to six months that it was considered normal for this age by doctors for many years.

This situation is different today, because most babies begin eating solid foods by the time they are three months old. Most of the changes are due to the excellent prepared baby foods.

In spite of all these advances in the availability of iron-containing foods, many modern infants develop a considerable degree of anemia. One of two things are usually found responsible. Either the child does not eat well, or some infection is causing trouble. -

A sick child will not eat enough food to meet the extra body needs created by illness. A vicious circle is often created as a result. A poorly nourished child or infant is less able to combat infections. He will have one cold or ear infection after another, thus he continues to eat poorly. His blood iron level gets lower and lower.

It is true that premature infants and twins are more apt to be anemic than full term or single birth children. Children born to mothers who did not take extra iron during pregnancy or who were anemic during that period are apt to be low on blood iron, also.

Often all that is needed is to persuade your child that there are other foods in addition to milk. Ocassionally it may be necessary to reduce sharply the amount of milk the child is allowed to have so that he will take the cereals, vegetables and meat his system needs.

Keep in mind that as important a food as milk is, it is not a source of iron. Your child needs minerals he can get from meat, eggs, vegetables and cereals if he is to be well and happy.
